The Australian Alliance for Energy Productivity (A2EP) is an independent, not-for-profit coalition of more than 80 business and research leaders helping Australian businesses pursue a cleaner and more successful future by producing more with less energy.

At A2EP we ACE energy productivity by:

- Amplifying our members voices and Advocating for programs and policies to help end users achieve energy productivity, growth, and an orderly transition to a zero emissions future
- Connecting our members, partners and stakeholders to the information and people they need
- Exploring the world's best practice for policy and technologies and Educating our audience with trusted, independent and practical insight.

With an emphasis on collaboration, our aim is to further technologies and systems that don't just use less energy but yield far more value from every unit of energy used.

Established in 2009, our work is supported by a global network of partners with whom we collaborate and share insights. We are regularly engaged by federal and state governments on the subject of energy productivity and have contributed to the development of various policy initiatives and programs technologies and systems.

A coalition for collaboration

As an A2EP Member, you are part of an Alliance of industry and research leaders committed to decarbonisation, innovation and improving energy productivity as we transition to a clean energy economy.

We aim to introduce and bring Members together to spark mutually beneficial collaborations and partnerships with trusted organisations.

A2EP is a trusted partner of governments. Membership with A2EP gives your company the chance of consideration for government projects and demonstration programs we administer. Also with your input we can help shape government policy and programs that will help get your energy productivity project become a reality.
